Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

Message from the President

Dear Colleagues,

The good name and reputation of Mota-Engil SGPS, S.A. are the product of the dedication and hard work of each and every one of us. Together, it is our responsibility to preserve and improve that reputation. Our goal is not only to obey the laws, rules, and regulations that apply to our business, but also to strive to achieve high standards of business conduct.

We run our business in a direct, clear, and ethical manner. We take full responsibility for what we do and what we say, and we strive to create a challenging and motivating working environment that rewards teamwork. We respect and recognise different ways of working, as well as lifestyle and cultural differences.

This Code of Ethics and Business Conduct (“Code”) provides an overview of our fundamental business values, which are based on our business ethics and our commitment to integrity. It applies to every member of our staff, directors, consultants, contractors and subcontractors, and to our subsidiaries worldwide. It summarises some of our most important principles and policies. This Code should be used in conjunction with the laws and regulations governing the jurisdictions where you operate.

The content of the Code is not new. The policies set out in the Code are part of our Company's long tradition insofar as our adoption of ethical business standards is concerned. You should read the Code carefully and ensure you understand its contents, the consequences of non-compliance, and the importance of the Code for our Company's success.

If you have any questions, contact your line manager, the Company's Compliance Helpline¹ or any of the other people identified in this Code. If you are in any doubt about whether a particular practice or issue is recommendable or appropriate, you should seek proper advice.

We all share the responsibility for safeguarding the principles of this Code and for promptly drawing attention to any violations or potential violations that may occur. If our Company is to provide staff with a healthy workplace and an excellent working environment, it is essential that everyone is aware of these matters, that every question is answered and that every difficulty is addressed and resolved.

Sincerely,

António Mota
Chairman of the Board of Directors

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

1.

OUR CODE OF BUSINESS CONDUCT

1.1 Object

Mota-Engil SGPS, S.A., together with its subsidiaries, branches and affiliates (collectively, the "Company") undertakes to carry out its business activities and relationships with dedication, commitment, professionalism and integrity.

Our Company's business ethic is based on compliance with criteria that promote the Company's values, culture and management model and foster respect for individuals and their rights.

This Code's aim is to establish the principles and rules that guide our Company and constitute the basis of the behaviour that the Company expects from you. This Code comes into force in 2015 and may be updated periodically by the Company's Board of Directors ("Board").

1.2 Scope of implementation

The Code applies to all individuals working for the Company at any level and in any category. This means it applies to senior and middle management, directors, other employees (permanent, fixed-term and temporary), consultants, contractors, subcontractors, trainees, seconded personnel, casual, interim and home workers, volunteers, interns, agents, sponsors or any other person associated our Company or with its management, directors and employees, irrespective of their location.

Our Company similarly hopes that its partners will be aware of the Code, and abide by the same standards in their relations with the Company and other representatives of the Company.

You should abide by this Code in the course of your day-to-day duties since it establishes the behavioural model coherent with our Company's business culture.

1.3 The Relation between the Code and other Company policies

This Code should be interpreted in conjunction with any other Company policies mentioned in it and with any additional policies, rules and procedures that the Company may adopt from time to time.

1.4 Monitoring and compliance

The Board is responsible for supervising the implementation of this Code and for carrying out the annual revision of the principles set forth in it, in order to ensure that it is effective and properly implemented.

As a Company, we are committed to complying with this Code and to applying the principles set forth in it to all of our dealings with shareholders, partners, customers, suppliers, employees and the community.

It is the duty of the Board, senior managers, and operational managers to set the example, guide and support their teams in complying with this Code.

GROUP SPIRIT

Consolidate the sense of belonging, respect for the differences, loyalty and reciprocity in a global and culturally diverse context, maintaining pride in the past and strengthening the confidence in the future.

OUR RESPONSIBILI- -LITIES AT WORK

3.1 Compliance with laws, rules and regulations

You must, at all times, abide by all laws, rules, regulations, and professional standards applicable in the country where you are working or in which the Company is operating.

3.2 Company governance

Our Company will be managed transparently and in compliance with the standards, guidelines and principles of good corporate governance, in accordance with our commitment to our shareholders, partners, customers, suppliers, employees and the community.

3.3 Conflict of interests

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

It is your responsibility to ensure that you act in the Company's best interests and that you do not act in any way that would jeopardise that responsibility.

A conflict of interests² occurs when your personal interests³ interfere with those of the Company. A situation of conflict could occur if you undertake actions or have interests that make it difficult for you to carry out your duties objectively and effectively. You must perform your duties in an honest and ethical manner, including the way in which you deal with real, apparent and potential conflicts of interest between your personal and business relationships. This includes fully disclosing any real, apparent or potential conflict of interests as defined herein.

If you believe that there might be a conflict of interests or that an activity or relationship in which you are involved could constitute a conflict of interest, you should inform the Company's Ethics Hotline⁴ and your line manager. You should be especially careful if you have a direct or indirect interest in a company or have the capacity to influence a company with which our Company has a business relationship or which is one of our competitors. This applies whether the interest in question is yours personally or is through another related person. For the purposes of this Code, a "related person" is understood to mean your spouse, partner or significant other, child, parent, sibling, cousin, close personal friend or any other person (including agents) who may be entitled to act on your behalf. For example, a conflict of interests may also occur when one family member is directly subordinate to another.

3.3.1 Relatives working in the sector

You may encounter a situation in which a close relative is a competitor, supplier, or customer of our Company, or is one of their employees. Such situations are not necessarily prohibited but they should be handled with greater sensitivity with regard to security, confidentiality, and conflicts of interest. You should take the nature of your own responsibilities as a Company employee into account, as well as the nature of the other person's responsibilities; and, similarly, the access each has to their employer's confidential information. Such a situation could raise suspicion among your colleagues and could affect your professional relationships and your reputation for ethical behaviour.

Consequently, you should inform the Company's Compliance Helpline of any such situation so that the nature and scope of any potential conflict can be assessed. In certain cases, the risk for our Company's interests may be sufficiently remote that the Company's Compliance Helpline does no more than to remind you of your duty not to reveal confidential Company information, and not to take part, on behalf of our Company, in decisions involving the other company. In other cases, stronger measures may be needed to address a potential conflict of interests.

3.3.2 Corporate opportunities

² A "conflict of interest" occurs when the direct or indirect personal interest of a given employee influences, or has the capacity to influence, the proper performance of his or her professional duties, and which causes, or has the capacity to cause, a conflict between the employee's personal interests and the rights and interests of the Company, with potentially harmful results for the Company's rights, interests, property and/or reputation.

³ An employee's "personal interest" is understood to mean a situation where an employee may have the opportunity, in the course of his or her duties, to obtain personal gain (or to mitigate a potential personal loss). Such situations may involve monies, valuables or other goods or services and/or other property rights, whether for the employee, his or her family or third parties.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

You must promote the Company's legitimate interests whenever the opportunity arises. If you become aware of a business or investment opportunity in which the Company could be interested, or which in some other way comes within the scope of our business activity, you must not attempt to profit from, or engage in, that opportunity without the prior written consent of the Company's Compliance Helpline. This includes opportunities involving the use of corporate property or information, or your position in the Company; for example, through one of the Company's competitors, customers, suppliers, or actual or potential business partners. You may not use corporate property or information, or your position in the Company, for undue personal gain. Similarly, you may not engage in any activity as a competitor of the Company.

3.4 Corruption and bribery

Our Company has a policy of zero tolerance with regard to both active and passive corruption and bribery and is committed to complying with the relevant anti-corruption and anti-bribery legislation in every jurisdiction where we operate.

Please refer to the Company's Anti-Corruption and Bribery Policy, which sets out your responsibilities in relation to ensuring compliance with applicable anti-bribery laws, rules and regulations.

Please refer to our Company's Anti-Corruption and Bribery Policy for further details.

3.4.1 Offers, gifts and hospitality

You must not give, promise to give, offer or accept any payment, gift or hospitality in the expectation or hope of being granted or achieving a business advantage or to reward someone for a commercial advantage already granted.

Please refer to our Company's Anti-Corruption and Bribery Policy for further details.

3.4.2 Relations with the Government and authorities

Concerning public politics, the Company does not usually adopt any position, directly or indirectly, or contribute in any way to political organisations.

Our Company is obliged to comply with all national and international legislation in force in any country where it operates. You must not give, promise to give or offer payments, gifts, or hospitality to a public official in order to facilitate or expedite any business activity.

Please refer to our Company's Anti-Corruption and Bribery Policy for further details.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

3.5 Relations with Customers, Suppliers and Service Providers

You should take measures that will help ensure that the Company only maintains business relationships with companies and individuals who acknowledge this code and have the same standards of compliance and integrity that we do.

You must refuse any business relationship and must not provide any assistance to anyone who adopts illegal practices. You must report any violation of this principle to the Company's Ethics Hotline

Please refer to the specific requirements of third party due diligence procedures, namely the "Third Party Procedures" internal standard in our Company's Anti-Corruption and Bribery Policy.

3.5.1 Relations with customers

You must act professionally and efficiently in order to supply excellent, high-quality service that will help maintain and strengthen our Company's relationships with its customers and optimise our strong image and reputation.

3.5.2 Relations with suppliers and service providers

Our Company will choose its suppliers and service providers independently and objectively, on the basis of market conditions, service quality and cost criteria.

Our Company's negotiations must be conducted on the basis of good faith and honour in respect of the contractual obligations to which we have committed.

3.6 Relations with the Media

If you are not one of our Company's official spokespeople, you may not speak to the press, stock-exchange analysts, other members of the financial community, shareholders, or groups or organisations, either as a representative of the Company or about Company activity, except when you have been specifically authorised to do so by a member of the Executive Board. Requests for financial or other information about the Company from the media, press, financial community, shareholders, or the public must be addressed to press@mota-engil.com

Any information given to the media and publicly disseminated must be informative and true.

Any public information generated and communicated by the Company must comply with all the applicable legislation and regulations in force. Any public financial information about the Company must present its financial circumstances for a given date or period in a complete, precise and trustworthy manner, and must have been prepared within the applicable time period.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

3.7 Relations with the community

3.7.1 Human Rights

Our Company recognizes Human Rights in all cultural, socioeconomic, and geographic contexts where it operates, respecting the respective traditions and cultures and promoting support for local communities in accordance with the specific interests of each region.

3.7.2 Child labour

Our Company prohibits any situations which involve or may be related to child or forced labour.

3.7.3 Social responsibility

Our Company is strongly committed to pursuing and strengthening its strategy of ethical, social, and environmentally responsible management. Our corporate social responsibility programme includes the following general goals:

- (a) Creation of value based on the best international practices;
- (b) Eco-efficiency and innovation;
- (c) Protection of the environment;
- (d) Corporate ethics;
- (e) Dialogue with the stakeholders; and
- (f) Human capital management.

Our Company is committed to contributing to a fairer and more prosperous society, rendering compatible economic growth, social cohesion, and environmental protection, and thereby simultaneously ensuring a better quality of life for the present and future generations.

4.1 Company Assets

This Code requires that we protect our Company's assets⁵ and ensure that they are used efficiently for legitimate business purposes. Theft, negligence and waste all have a direct impact on the Company's profitability. You should take measures to prevent against damage, theft, or improper use of Company property. If you leave our Company, we must return any and all of its property that may be in your possession. Unless specific authorisation has been given otherwise, Company assets, including equipment, materials, resources and proprietary information, must only be used for the Company's business purposes. You will look after Company funds and property as if they were your own, safeguarding them against improper use, loss, fraud or theft.

⁵ "Assets" are understood to be property, funds, information or intellectual property held by our Company, as well as equipment used individually, such as mobile phones and computers.

4. PROTECTION OF THE COMPANY'S RESOURCES AND INFORMATION

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

4.2 Company accounting records

Our Company must record all of its financial activities in accordance with all the applicable laws and accounting practices. All transactions must be duly authorised and recorded fully and precisely. It is strictly forbidden to record or document false or misleading information. You must never create false or misleading reports, or make payments or create accounts in the Company's name on the understanding that part of the payment or account will be used for a purpose other than the one described in the corroborating documents.

If you become aware, or suspect, that someone has falsified Company accounts, you must report it immediately to your line manager or to the Company's Ethics Hotline. Concealing information from the management or from internal or external auditors could seriously prejudice our Company.

4.3 Record keeping

Our Company is committed to complying with the laws and regulations applicable to record keeping. All records shall be kept for no less than the minimum period of time established in those laws and regulations. All records that are irreplaceable and critical to the continuation of our Company's business must be identified and stored in a safe place on the Company's premises. This would include such items as: accounts receivable and accounts payable, lists of active customers, bonds, notes, shares, company statutes, minutes and associated records, internal memoranda, company approvals and resolutions, mortgages, originals of signed contracts, payroll records, and discs and cassettes containing back-up copies of data. These records and documents, which bear the signatures of the top-level directors of the Company, must never be destroyed.

Other company records will only be disposed of or destroyed when they become clearly obsolete, have no further business use and are no longer subject to any legal or regulatory requirement governing how long they will be kept for. Whole groups or categories of records may only be routinely destroyed if such destruction is carried out in line with the current practice and does not contravene the guidelines shown above, or if it has been specifically approved by the Legal Department and by the Company's Compliance Helpline.

If you become aware of a summons, pending or potential legal proceedings, or a government investigation, we must retain and preserve ALL records that may be called for in the summons, or that may be relevant to the legal proceedings, or that may be related to the investigation, until such time as the Legal Department tells you how you should proceed. Any physical destruction of documents must be authorised by the Legal Department and by the Company's Compliance Helpline.

4.4 Confidential information

In the course of your work at our Company, you may become aware of facts about its activity, plans, operations, or trade secrets that are not known to the public or to our competitors. Confidential information includes all written or verbal information that has not been made public and which becomes known to you, directly or indirectly, through any form of communication or observation, and which, if disclosed, could be used by competitors or be prejudicial to the Company or its customers. In particular, it includes all non-public financial, technical, operational, commercial, and personnel-related and management information, as well as other information, data and expertise.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

You must not disclose any information entrusted to you by our Company or its suppliers or customers, except if the Company has authorised you to do so, or you are required to do so by law. If you believe you may have disclosed confidential information, for example, by sending an e-mail to the wrong person or by leaving documents in a public place, you must immediately inform your line manager or the Company's Ethics Hotline.

Your obligation to treat information as confidential does not end when you leave the Company. When your employment contract ends, you must return everything in your possession that belongs to the Company, including all documents and other materials containing confidential information belonging to the Company and its customers or suppliers. You may not disclose confidential information to a new employer or to anyone else when you cease to be an employee of the Company.

All non-public resources and assets made available to you by our Company are Company property and you may not use them for your personal benefit or private use.

4.5 Ban on insider information

Our Company obeys and complies with the laws relating to securities, ensuring that insider information is secure and protected.

Insider information is information of a precise nature that is not made available to the general public and which is related, directly or indirectly, to our Company or to our Company's securities. The disclosure of such information to the general public would probably have a significant effect on the price of our Company's securities.

While performing your duties at the Company, you may obtain non-public information about our Company's suppliers, customers or other individuals or entities who have dealings with our Company. You are forbidden from buying or selling securities of companies listed on a stock exchange whenever you have non-public information that could, if it were disclosed, have a significant effect on the price of our Company's securities. You are similarly forbidden from passing on this type of information to anyone who may buy or sell securities, a procedure known as "tipping".

4.6 Economic sanctions and embargoes

Our Company complies with national and international embargoes applicable to its activity. To this end, our Company an evaluation of all new and current entities and individuals with which it does business, using the applicable sanctions lists, including the List of Specially Designated Nationals (Lista de Cidadãos Nacionais Especialmente Identificados) and the Blocked Persons and the Sectoral Sanctions Identification List (Lista de Pessoas Bloqueadas e Sanções Setoriais) issued by the US Department of the Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control, OFAC (Gabinete de Controlo de Ativos Estrangeiros) and the EU list of specially designated persons.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

5. FAIR PRACTICES

5.1 Ban on unfair practices

You must commit to acting fairly in your dealings with the Company's customers, suppliers, competitors, and employees. You must never take unfair advantage of a third party by means of manipulation, concealment, use of insider information, imprecise presentation of material facts or any other unfair practice.

5.2 Competition laws

Our Company strictly complies with all applicable competition laws. These laws are highly complex and matters related to competition should not be addressed without consulting the Legal Department. Any violation of the competition laws could lead to both the Company and yourself being held liable. It would be impossible to include all of the relevant legislation here in this Code, but we have provided below a general overview of the types of conduct that should be avoided. If you are involved or become involved in activities similar to those identified in this Code or if you detect situations which, in your opinion, could raise questions of competition, you must immediately consult the Compliance Helpline for further guidance.

5.2.1 Conspiracies and collaboration between competitors

Competition laws promote and preserve the independence of each competitor in their decision-making on prices, production and other competitively sensitive factors. Competition laws are infringed when competitors enter into agreements which limit the independence of decision-making and restrict market operations. Such agreements could include price-fixing, restriction of production or quality control of the products or the division of the market by customers, territories, products or purchases. You must never enter into any agreement with any competitor about any of these topics in view of the fact that such agreements could potentially be illegal.

Illegal agreements do not necessarily have to be set down in writing nor even express mutual commitments or guarantees. They may be based on casual conversations, informal discussions or merely exchanges of information between competitors that could lead to price-fixing or some other adjustment. Any communication with a competitor's representative, however harmless it may appear at the time, may later be subject to legal scrutiny and constitute the basis of charges of improper or illegal conduct.

Coalitions between competitors, trade associations and/or organisations that set standards may create concerns about fair competition, even when such coalitions serve legitimate goals. Exchanging sensitive information with competitors about topics such as prices, profit margins, production levels, invoicing or advertising practices could potentially violate competition laws, as well as establishing a standard behaviour with the aim and effect of prejudicing the competition. If you are present at a meeting where potentially sensitive topics are being discussed and there is no lawyer present on behalf of the competition, you should protest, leave the meeting and immediately notify the Legal Department.

In order to avoid improper agreements, our Company forbids:

- (a) Conversations and contacts with competitors about prices, costs or terms and conditions of sale;
- (b) Conversations and contacts with suppliers and customers that unfairly restrict market operations or exclude competitors from the market;
- (c) Agreements with competitors relating to the allocation of markets or customers;

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

- (d) Agreements with others with the aim of boycotting customers or suppliers; and
- (e) Any unfair use of our Company's position in the market.

5.2.2 Gathering of information about the Company's competitors

It is entirely legitimate for our Company to gather information about the market, including information about our competitors and their products and services. However, there are limits to the ways in which such information may be obtained and used. When gathering information about competitors, you must follow these guidelines:

- (a) Gather information about our Company's competitors from sources such as published articles, advertisements, brochures, other non-proprietary materials, consultancy surveys and conversations with our Company's customers, as long as such methods cannot suggest that our Company is attempting to:
 - (a) conspire with the competitors and use the customers as messengers, or
 - (b) gather information in violation of the agreement of non-disclosure that a customer may have entered into with a competitor or by other unfair means. You must be able to identify the source of any information about the competitor.
- (b) Never try to obtain a competitor's trade secrets or any other proprietary information using illegal means such as theft, espionage, bribery or violation of a competitor's non-disclosure agreement.
- (c) If there is the slightest indication that the person/entity who has the information in their possession did not obtain it legally, you must refuse it. If you receive any information about competitors from an anonymous source or which has been flagged as confidential, you should not examine it and you must contact the Company's Ethics Hotline immediately.

6. OUR WORKING RELATIONS

6.1 Respect, integrity, loyalty and team spirit

The relation between employees must be based on mutual respect, loyalty and rectitude, in observance with the principles of ethics and cooperation, contributing to a good working and team environment. Everyone who works for our Company must contribute towards the creation and maintenance of an environment in which we can all feel respected and valued. Supervisors and managers, in particular, are responsible for promoting a working environment that promotes honesty, integrity, respect and trust.

You should be tolerant and respectful of cultures, opinions and lifestyles that are different from your own, always taking into consideration the effect your behaviour may have on your colleagues and other parties.

Discriminatory behaviour, intimidation, harassment and physical aggression are strictly forbidden in the workplace. Intimidation in the workplace is the unacceptable singling out of a particular employee from among his or her colleagues that could result in a limitation of that employee's rights or cause him or her to feel intimidated.

6.2 Protection of employees' personal data and privacy

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

Our Company collects and stores personal data related to the employment relationship between the Company and its employees. Only the personal data required by law and necessary to ensure the effectiveness of the Company's operations is collected and stored. The Company assures the employees' entitlement to review and correct their personal data, in strict adherence to applicable laws and regulations.

The personnel responsible for maintaining personal data (whether it is employees' personal data or any other counterparties' personal data which our company has operations with) and those who have been granted access to this information must not disclose, must not utilize it to any purpose, different from the ones defined by the company; to do so could constitute a violation of the applicable legislation or a breach of the Company's personal data protection policy. Access to personnel records must be restricted to those who have appropriate authorisation and a clear work-related reason for accessing them.

6.3 Equal opportunities and non-discrimination

As an employer, the Company operates a policy of equal opportunities with regard to hiring and promotion practices, benefits and salaries. The Company will not tolerate any discrimination whatsoever against any person on the basis of their ethnicity, religion, colour, gender, age, marital status, nationality, sexual orientation, citizenship or disability (when the applicant or employee is qualified to perform the essential duties required for their position, with or without reasonable conditions) or for any other reason prohibited by law. The above applies to recruitment, contracting, assignment, promotion and any other condition of employment. You are entitled to equal opportunities and fair treatment based on merit.

The Company will not tolerate the use of discriminatory reprimands, nor any other remarks, jokes or conduct liable to cause or foster an offensive or hostile working environment.

6.4 Sexual and other types of harassment

It is strictly forbidden any type of harassment, carried out when accessing to the job or executing the employment contract or during professional training, whether it is in the workplace itself or outside it.

It is considered harassment any type of undesirable behaviour - gesture, word, active or omissive attitude, etc. - regardless of illegitimate discrimination factors, having as objective or result:

- (a) Affecting the person's dignity or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or destabilizing environment for the individual;
- (b) Unreasonable disturbance in the employee's working performance;
- (c) The conditioning of the decision to hire an individual, or his/her acceptance by it.

Sexual harassment constitutes any and all undesirable conduct of a sexual nature, whether it is in a verbal or nonverbal, physical or other type of form, with the objectives or effects described in the previous paragraph.

Without prejudice to the compensatory, direct or return-related consequences, the Company shall institute the appropriate disciplinary procedure whenever it becomes aware of alleged harassment situations in a labour context.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

The Complainant of the harassment and the witnesses indicated by him / her cannot be sanctioned disciplinarily (unless they do so by knowing the falsehood of the allegation and exclusively with the intention to harm the Denounced and / or Company), nor in any way be prejudiced in their status or in their exercise of labour or civil rights.

6.5 Safety in the workplace

The health, safety and protection of our employees are paramount for our Company. The Company complies with all the rules relating to occupational hygiene and safety in the workplace, with the aim of fostering a responsible work culture in which everyone is concerned with health, safety and the prevention of occupational risks. You are personally responsible for keeping the facilities free of recognised risks and for obeying the hygiene and safety rules. Work areas must be kept clean and tidy in order to encourage operational efficiency and promote good safety practices. You must abide by the workplace safety requirements and the fire safety rules in accordance with the applicable legislation and the Company's internal procedures.

If you detect any circumstance that could be dangerous to health or safety, you must report it to the HR Department.

6.5.1 Drugs and alcohol

- (a) Except for approved Company events, you are not allowed to have alcohol in your possession or be under the influence of alcohol while you are on Company premises.
- (b) You must be conscious of the fact that you are representing our Company when you attend Company events, travel for work-related reasons or attend other business-related events. Unacceptable behaviour resulting from the excessive consumption of alcohol may be treated as disciplinary offences, when appropriate.
- (c) You may not report to work under the influence of drugs or alcohol. During your working hours at the Company, or when operating or driving Company machinery or vehicles, or when you are on Company premises during your breaks, you may never use, transfer, sell, manufacture or have in your possession drugs or associated paraphernalia, alcohol or other substances which produce a similar effect. If you are taking any medication that could pose a risk to safety, you must immediately inform your line manager of this fact.

6.6 Training

Our Company has implemented a training plan that is intended to provide you with orientated, continuous technical and behavioural training that will allow you to maximise your skills and standards of excellence. Employees will receive specific training on compliance, which you must attend.

You should continually strive to improve your knowledge and develop your skills in order to achieve an excellent level of performance in your duties and help us provide our customers with the best possible service.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

6.7 Communication

Our Company seeks to facilitate communication and dialogue between employees and managers by encouraging active involvement, initiatives and consultations.

6.8 Innovation

Our Company promotes the use of technology and innovation in its business areas with the aim of maximizing the returns on its activity, promoting and encouraging the development of new ideas that bring added value.

INFRINGEMENTS OF THE CODE

7.1 Responsibilities

You are personally responsible for complying with the obligations of this Code. Your conduct must be governed, in all circumstances, by the principles and values set out here. Our Company has a series of resources and people at your disposal to answer your questions and assist you with difficult decisions. Failure to comply with this Code may result in financial losses, damage to our Company's reputation, or lead to you or the Company suffering criminal or civil sanctions or being held liable

Copies of this Code are available on the Company's webpage.

7.2 Compliance Helpline and anti-retaliation policies

7.2.1 Company's Ethics Hotline

You may report alleged irregularities of a general, operational or financial nature and/or infringements of this Code or Company's policies at any time by contacting your line manager or the Ethics Hotline, unless applicable laws and regulations demand you report to other entities⁶. You need have no fear of retaliation if, and as long as you have acted in good faith when reporting.

All irregularity/infringement reports must be submitted by email or written letter, to one of the following addresses:

- (a) etica@mota-engil.com
- (b) Etica – Rua do Rego Lameiro, n.º 38, 4300-454 Porto

For more information, please consult the published Whistleblowing Procedure.

⁶ This provision does not exempt the local/regional entity from forwarding the reported event to the Company's Ethics Hotline.

Code of Ethics and Business Conduct

7.2.2 Company's Compliance Helpline

Our Company provides a Helpline that you may use to seek guidance or raise any issues related to this Code or the Company's policies. When you contact the Helpline to ask questions, you may do so anonymously; however, by identifying yourself, you may help the Company to reply faster.

You can contact the Compliance Help Line by sending an e-mail to the following address: compliance@mota-engil.com

7.3 Disciplinary proceedings due to infringement

It is our Company's aim to make every reasonable effort to guard against the occurrence of conduct contrary to this Code and our policies and in the event that any such conduct is detected, to put a stop to it as soon as is reasonably possible.

Without prejudice to having specific complementary training of civil or criminal liability arising from the behaviour in question, employees who violate this Code or any other Company policy will be subject to a disciplinary proceeding in order to apply a sanction previewed in law, appropriated in type and measure, taking into account its adequacy, effectiveness and proportionality, in the light of the gravity, fault and consequences associated with the fact practised.

In case of any discrepancy between the English and the Portuguese version of this Code, the Portuguese version shall prevail.
